

Conferences on Charlie Munger, value investing set before Berkshire meeting

POSTED: TUESDAY, MARCH 17, 2015 1:00 AM

Investing conferences will be held at Creighton University and the University of Nebraska at Omaha during the days before Berkshire Hathaway Inc.'s annual shareholders meeting May 2 at the CenturyLink Center Omaha.

The conference at UNO is April 30 and May 1 at Mammel Hall, home of the College of Business Administration. Registration and details, including a list of more than 20 speakers, are at valueinvestorconference.com. Fees can be discounted for early registration.

The UNO conference starts with a "Charlie Munger Summit" on April 30, with speakers discussing Berkshire Vice Chairman Charlie Munger and his relationship with Warren Buffett, Berkshire chairman and CEO, for $695. A separate dinner with speaker costs $75.

After the Munger event, a value investing conference starts April 30 and continues through 5 p.m. May 1. Seats are sold out, but there's an overflow room with video connections at $1,795 per seat. Robert Miles, an author of Buffett books, organizes the conference and teaches a course about Buffett during the week.

At Creighton, investment students at the Heider College of Business, located at the Harper Center, will host a free panel discussion from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. May 1, with book signings and refreshments before and after. No registration is necessary.

Charlie Munger is vice chairman of Berkshire Hathaway.
